DEATH OF D. H. WALKER FAMOUS POT ASH EXPERT

David H. Walker, better known among his intimates as "Dick," died this morning at 9:30 in his room at the Mizpah hotel from malignant influenza contracted while Mr. Walker was home on a visit to his family at Hollywood, Cal., during the Christmas holidays.

Fatal termination of the illness was not expected and the death came with a suddenness that rendered his friends speechless with grief. Mr. Walker was extremely fond of his family and his home life was an idyllic existence with a wife and three children always looking forward with great anticipation to his periodical visits owing to the fact that Mr. Walker's business kept him almost constantly moving around from one place to another. Having enjoyed his respite from business Mr. Walker returned to Tonopah where he had an engagement to meet Victor Barndt and his brother, Julius, who were due here January 2. He kept the appointment with Julius and visited the Spanish Belt mine at Barcelona, returning next day. That evening he complained of having an intense headache which was all the more surprising as he was of rugged constitution and never was heard to utter a complaint about trivial ills. However, the experience did not prevent him from keeping a dinner engagement with Mr. and Mrs. Warren Richardson. During the dinner he said he was feeling cold and asked to keep on his sweater. Next morning, January 4th, he remained in bed, saying he had a light cold but was feeling weak.
